

Arbor Day 2008

Liberty County businesses, churches, civic clubs, schools and others met the challenge this Arbor Day planting more than 120 trees community-wide.

Members of the Midway Middle School Builders Club plant a dogwood tree to fulfill their mission to beautify their school.

Dem Heavy Chevy Riderz dedicated their dogwood to their members who serve in the military and are currently deployed.

Nurses and staff from the Liberty County Health Dept. and Diversity Health Center had a ball finding a good spot for their dogwood tree Thursday.

Holtzman Real Estate Services property manager, Toby Mahan, puts his back into digging a hole for the oak tree that was planted Thursday morning.

Coldwell Banker Holtzman, Realtors chose the perfect location at their General Stewart office to watch their oak tree grow into the future.

Cheri Johns, with Sign Concepts, even got her dogs involved in Arbor Day!

Pascal Brewer digs up a tree to be planted somewhere in Liberty County.

First United Methodist PreK plan to use their tree as a learning tool for students and faculty.

Liberty County Solid Waste staff planted several trees this week in honor of Arbor Day.

City of Hinesville employee, Becky Widincamp led the effort to plant trees at the Liberty Nature Trail in town.

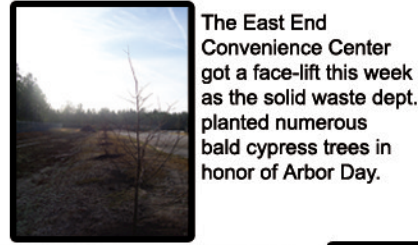

Mr. Baker's class at Button Gwinett Elementary School had a great time digging a hole for their dogwood tree.

Assistant District Attorney Melissa Poole teaches her daughter, Aubrey, early the value of planting trees. Pictured above is employees of the DA's office with their 2 new dogwood trees that they are going to use to commemorate the memory of two employees who passed in 2007.

The historic Dorchester Presbyterian Church planted 13 dogwood trees.

The East End Convenience Center got a face-lift this week as the solid waste dept. planted numerous bald cypress trees in honor of Arbor Day.

City of Midway Mayor, Don Emmons, even helped dig the hole for the trees that went into the ground at Midway City Hall.

The Flemington City Council planted two LeCounte Pear trees on their grounds Thursday.

Hinesville Assistant City Manager, Kenny Howard, assisted in planting numerous trees in the Irene B. Thomas Park.

The Liberty Gateway Peer Support Program met Friday morning to plant a dogwood.

Mayor Pray, along with council and city employees met in Walthourville Friday to plant trees for Arbor Day.

Mrs. Coleman's Agriculture class at Bradwell Institute planted a tree that will become a class assignment to grow!

JoAnn Clark with the Midway Museum was happy to plant trees on the site for Arbor Day.

In front, Immediate Past Chairman of the Liberty County Chamber of Commerce, Gary Walker stands ready to plant a LeCounte Pear tree, along with Anna Chaffin, Liberty County Development Authority Director of Public Relations and Research, Kenny Smiley, Chamber Director and in the back are other Chamber board members.

Business owner, Tom Jackson, planted several dogwoods on his property to honor the day.

United Way Director, Leah Poole and Keep Liberty County Beautiful Director, Sara Swida planted trees at the West End Convenience Center Friday.

Dorchester Academy participated with Arbor Day, planting 4 oak trees at the location in Midway.

Riceboro Mayor Bill Austin helped plant LeCounte Pear trees and dogwoods at Riceboro City Hall.

Aaron Alvarado and his son, Gabriel, planted an oak tree Thursday.

For more information or to get involved with Keep Liberty County Beautiful please call Sara Swida at (912) 368.4888.